SCIENTIFIC POULTRY RAISING

Most Interesting Talk Before Utah State Poultry Association.

Mr. L. F. Boyle was at the meeting of the Utah State Poultry association Thursday night at the Commercial club, and delivered an address concerning what he had learned at Cornell, where he is now assistant instructor in poultry raising. Mr. Boyle, who went to Cornell University to study scientific methods of raising chickens so that he can, when his course of study is completed, take the management of a large chicken ranch near Salt Lake City, told of the latest methods of handling incubators and brooders, and of the best methods of feeding poultry. He also explained the manner in which Cornell students were instructed concerning the management of poultry shows and the judging of the merits of chickens.

After Mr. Boyle's address, the poultry show at the Utah State Fair in October was discussed. It was decided that the members of the association should do all in their power to make the exhibit of chickens at the fair as large as possible. While the association will not arrange for an exhibit, most of the members will enter into the competition for the prizes at the fair.

This, the initial meeting of the season, was very interesting and marked by the usual enthusiasm. The auxiliary organizations,—Rhode Island Red men, and White Wyandotte men are active as usual.

An Indiana man sold $28,700 worth of poultry and eggs last year. Of course he was a breeder of pure blood fowls, but it shows that poultry raising as a distinct business can be made just as profitable as any other business.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Robert W. Chambers, the author, is a bridge-whist enthusiast.

Secretary Root is the only Cabinet member who wears a silk hat down to work every day.

Harry Leon Wilson, the novelist and playwright, was editor of Puck several years.

William A. Brady, one of the big theatrical producers and managers of New York, began life as a newsboy in San Francisco.

Senator Hemenway, of Indiana, once dug ditches in Boonville, the village he still lives in; and Senator Beveridge from the same state, was a book agent, and a good one.

Frank H. Hitchcock, who is managing Secretary Taft's campaign in Washington, is a voluminous author. He wrote about forty pamphlets on foreign trade when he was in the Department of Agriculture.

Representative Moore, of Philadelphia, went to Panama and Cuba with Speaker Cannon and his party last spring, and, when he came back, wrote a book about it called, With Speaker Cannon Through the Tropics. The Speaker got a finely bound copy and Moore got good committee assignments.—Saturday Post.
